AP623 Understanding Commerce, Culture, & Congregations

(1 credit)

James Gilmore | Room 5

Jan 7–10, Tues–Fri, 9:00 am–12:15 pm

This course introduces “cultural hermeneutics” and methods of interpreting the patterns of everyday life in which congregants dwell. The instruction aims to equip future pastors with various principles and approaches for maintaining a rich, ongoing, and multi-dimensional perspective concerning the cultural context in which their congregations are situated. In addition to examining the role of commerce and consumer behavior in shaping culture, we will focus on how the structure of designed spaces (via the practice of architecture), the drama of daily living (using models of theatre), and the substance of experiences (as expressions of value) shape the patterns of everyday existence. In addition, students will be introduced to a number of (leading edge) group-dynamic techniques for fostering healthy communication, facilitating engaging meetings, and staging compelling (non-worship) events within a local church body.

- This course can be used to fulfill the 1-credit Missions elective requirement for PT511.
- Prerequisite: none

PT516 Ministry in the Korean American Context (1 credit)

Steve Park, PhD | Room 4

Jan 28–31, Tues–Fri, 1:15–4:30 pm

The purpose of this course is to understand the context of Korean immigrants in North America and the historical process and formation of Christianity (with emphasis on Presbyterians) in Korea, with the resulting features distinct to Korean Christianity (and Korean Presbyterianism in particular). This course will also explore various models of ministry for Korean Americans presented in the last few decades, marked by large migration of Koreans into North America, and evaluate them in light of Reformed ecclesiology and concern for contextualization.

- This course can be used to fulfill the 1-credit Missions elective requirement for PT511.
- Prerequisite: none

ST542 The Christian Virtues in Reformed Moral Theology (1 credit)

David VanDrunen, PhD | Room 4

Jan 21–24, Tues–Fri, 1:00–4:15 pm

This course explores the importance of virtue in light of the broader Christian tradition, the early Reformed tradition, and recent scholarship. The focus of the course is on examining particular Christian virtues and their place in a godly moral life. Students are expected to complete modest reading assignments, participate in class sessions, and write several short essays that engage the readings.

- Prerequisite: none
